

Jennifer Raskas

Jennifer Raskas is the JCRC Director of the Israel Action Center (IAC). Before joining the JCRC, Jennifer was the Business and Community Development Manager for the Maryland/Israel Development Center where she advised Israeli and Maryland companies in order to foster bilateral economic development. Prior to that, she worked for the Government of Israel as the Director of Trade and Operations of the Economic Mission in Houston, Texas, and as the Public Affairs Officer for the Embassy of Israel in Washington, DC. She has organized and led numerous diverse delegations to Israel, including Harvard graduate students from 25 different countries as well as business professionals from the DC/Maryland area.

Jennifer received her Bachelor of Arts from Columbia University where she studied Middle East conflict resolution on a graduate level, and received her Master's Degree in Public Policy from the Harvard Kennedy School of Government, where she focused on Middle East studies. Jennifer and her husband, Mordechai, live in Silver Spring with their children.